Growing up in E. St. Louis, EDVANZD spent countless hours exploring his grandfather's massive record collection. Listening to multiple genres sparked his love for music and especially fueled his passion for hip-hop.

EDVANZD began his journey by performing on stage and being awarded an NAACP award among numerous other awards. He leaped from the stage to the screen when he debuted in the HBO movie "Soul of the Game," which led to being cast in several other star-studded films and television shows.

EDVANZD, has been heralded as a high-octane MC with a sharp lyrical prowess by such legendary lyricists as Busta Rhymes. Consistently honing his craft of wordplay has led to his own successful social media series #FireFlowFridays. Recently EDVANZD was crowned a top 5 finalist (out of over 7,000 artists) in Doritos Blaze The Beat where he opened for Wiz Khalifa and Goldlink in Vegas. EDVANZD is poised to step into the spotlight as the new face of hip-hop.

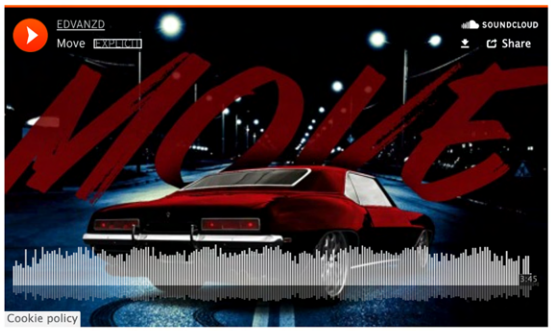
EDVanzd Raps Like A Possessed Man In "Move"

BY QUINCY DOMINIC ON JULY 13, 2019 • (LEAVE A COMMENT)



I wouldn't be surprised if EDVanzd's head was spinning while he was recording this song.

More than likely, EDVanzd raps better than you, your sibling and that one friend of yours you think has next. I know someone is going to feel offended by that comment, but once you hear "Move," you'll realize why I said what I said.

"Move" is powered by this out-of-this-worldly instrumental that sorta reminds me of an updated version of Lil Wayne's "A Milli" instrumental. Over this instrumental, EDVanzd absolutely spazzes, EDVANZD's latest offering is one that takes a little time to kick in. The opening moments utilize a characterful bass-line, tipping its hat to the legends of the genre - an alternative melody to lead, rather than purely a beat. On top of this you get the effected vocal hook that offers a series of short lines easily relevant to the contemporary rap sound. It's a fair enough presentation, but when the verse comes in is untimely the moment at which things get far more creative.

The verses lay out detail and personality, a performance that meanders and is consistently expressive and interesting. At these moments, the soundscape connects more strongly, seeing the track suddenly feel like a genuine hit from yesteryear - a mid-album D12 or Outkast track, but with a fresh identity and intention.

By the time the song comes to an end, it manages to leave a far more memorable mark than the intro first implies. In hindsight, that modern twang of the hook works well to grab the attention of a broader audience. I'm actually now keen to check out more music from EDVANZD - his bars intrigue and impress in a whole new way. Well worth stumbling upon.

EdVanzd – How U Wanna Do It

Jul 16, 2019 | Music | 0 comments

EdVanzd goes for a sly, sensuous style with the hot heat of "How U Wanna Do It". With such a physical, sexually charged sound the piece writhes in its desire for pleasure. A raw mixture of hip-hop, trap, grime, and electro filter into the mix giving the whole piece a gritty sound. The percussion bounces at its own pace. Nothing in the entire piece feels rushed for the production is allowed to simply sprawl. The atmosphere takes priority over all else. With a feeling of a sweaty, intimate setting the track refuses to let up. Going ever heavier into a sense of unbridled lust, it has a summer fling sort of air.

The song starts off slowly. From there volume becomes a must. EdVanzd requires that the song be felt as much as heard. By playing with listener expectations the track has a great spirit of pure uninhibited freedom to it. Lyrics focus on this element, the complete freedom, id almost. Allowing all of it to flow through EdVanzd proves to be a masterful lyricist always ensuring that every single moment is carefully selected. Done with such wildness, the song evolves in subtle yet sophisticated ways. Never overdoing things it is the stark minimalism that works wonders for the whole of the piece.

With "How U Wanna Do It" EdVanzd creates a pitch perfect sound one that harks back to the early roots of Miami bass while possessing a futuristic quality.

SINGLE REVIEW: EDVANZD – "HOW U WANNA DO IT?" FT. KEVIN HUES

Jake Kussmaul | 3 days ago | Review | 0 Comments

Edwin Morrow is an accomplished actor and budding rapper, originally from East St. Louis, Illinois and based in Los Angeles, California. Under the name Edvanzd, Morrow sought to expand his musical focus, debuting with the Peyote Beats-produced EP, The Prelude, in 2014. Currently, Morrow hosts a growing freestyle series called #FireFlowFridays, furthering his stature as a hip hop artist.

After a slew of successful follow-up singles over the years, Morrow's latest single, "How U Wanna Do It," was released back in June. Morrow and guest vocalist Kevin Hues are well-suited to the track, with Hues handling the chorus and Morrow on verses. Based on previous singles, which united a kind of blunt aggression with inspirational persistence, this track provides quite the contrast. What's on offer is a smooth, bass-filled backdrop for a
